

Mrs. Wightman Is Placed at the Top in Women's Tennis Ranking for Season of 1919

Miss Zinderstein Second To National Title Holder

Young Boston Star Put Ahead of Former Miss Bjurstedt, as the Latter Was Unable to Participate in Many Important Tournaments

By Fred Hawthorne

The women's season of lawn tennis closed with the playing of the annual New Jersey State championships in singles, doubles and mixed doubles, some three weeks ago, bringing to an end the most successful and interesting series of women's tournaments since the entry of the United States into the World War.

Mrs. Franklin I. Mallory, the former Miss Molla Bjurstedt, was dethroned from the position of metropolitan, national indoor, outdoor and turf court champion, being an absentee from the first and last events and suffering defeat at the hands of Miss Marion Zinderstein in the turf court title tournament, when she went down in a three-set match in the semi-final round at Philadelphia.

Mrs. George W. Wightman, of Boston, who, as Miss Hazel Hotchkiss, of California, had held the outdoor crown in 1909, 1910 and 1911, came back in wonderful style, winning the metropolitan and the national indoor and turf court championships and enjoying the most successful season she has had in eight years.

Miss Zinderstein, the brilliant young girl from Boston, also showed the best tennis of her short career. She finished as runner-up to Mrs. Wightman in both the indoor and turf court singles championships, was a semi-finalist in the singles of the metropolitan title tournament, and paired with Mrs. Wightman, won a national indoor doubles, and the metropolitan and turf court national doubles titles, paired with Miss Eleanor Goss. Surely a wonderful record of achievement for so young and inexperienced a player. Miss Goss did not take part in as many events as usual, and this was a pity for the tall New York girl has the basic tennis virtues of which champions are fashioned. Next season, paired with her play partner, should see her well up near the top.

Names Eastern Women
It is my purpose here, as in other years, to attempt a logical selection of the "first ten" women players in the country, based on their tournament records, and in looking over the list and my reasons for naming the various players, it should be borne in mind that, of necessity, mainly confined to the East for a number of years.

Mrs. Wightman has, beyond a doubt, won the No. 1 position for 1919. Her holding of three great championship titles alone would insure that proud position for her, aside from the high quality of her playing throughout a particularly busy season.

Neither Mrs. Mallory, Miss Goss nor Miss Zinderstein competed in the indoor singles tournament, but Mrs. Wightman played with such extended brilliance, defeating Miss Clara Cassell in the semi-final round at 6-0, 6-2, and Miss Zinderstein in the final at 6-1, 6-2, that many competent critics who watched her progress through the tournament believed she would have won the title even had she been able to compete in the draw. In the metropolitan tournament, on the other hand, Mrs. Wightman eliminated Mrs. Robert Le Roy in the semi-final round and took the measure of Miss Goss in the final by winning by a score of 6-1, 6-2, 6-0.

A few weeks later, on the turf of the Philadelphia-Crick Club, Mrs. Wightman fought her way through a notable fight, defeating Miss Zinderstein in the final round at 6-1, 6-2, 6-0. Mrs. Wightman's victory was a triumph for the former Miss Bjurstedt, who followed her triumph the week after by winning the New Jersey state championship.

It is hard to place Mrs. Mallory lower than first place, when we consider the power of her game and her tactical capabilities, but an unfortunate injury in the season kept her from competing in many of the important events for women tennis played in the East. Mrs. Mallory did not play in the final round of the metropolitan title tournament, but she was a notable factor in the final round of the national title tournament, where she defeated Miss Zinderstein in the semi-final round at 6-1, 6-2, 6-0.

Francis Ouimet maintains that the drive is fully as important as the putt when it comes to the general effect upon scoring in golf. In one way it is correct. If the golfer consistently thumps his tee shots into yawning traps or rugged grass, he can lose as many strokes from the tee as he can by consistently putting after the manner of a motor boat.

But there is still another angle to consider which gives scoring predominance to the putt over the drive. It is this: The golfer can make a bad drive and still equal or beat par quite often. It is only on the rarest occasions that he can make a bad putt and even equal par.

There can be a quick recovery from a poor putt, especially a fairly short one, is gone forever.

A Striking Example
Ouimet's own case in his match with Chick Evans is a striking example. In that battle he missed any number of drives through a tendency to hook the ball, but he made a few good ones. But on a number of occasions he pulled strokes traveled over into parallel fairways, leaving him an open shot at the hole.

Quimet won two or three holes from Evans, where the former was well off line and the latter was down the middle. But he won no holes where he missed a putt and where Evans dropped a good one.

Golf is replete with good and bad drives of fortune, but any other game. Good luck can turn a poor drive frequently into fairly pleasant results. The ball may either stop just short of a deep trap or reach a place in the rough where it can be easily played to the green or even travel to an adjoining fairway.

But there is no good luck to affect a short putt which hits by the hole, and there is no good luck to affect an approach putt that is ten feet short or ten feet over.

Another Instance
In his second trip around Oakmont before the August championship Bobby Jones played the last nine holes in miraculous figures, down in the low 30's—32, if we recall the details.

He started on the tenth hole by opening with a terrific howl. He must have been at least 125 yards off the course, maybe a 150. A slight putt might have cost him heavily. But the wide detour left him on the eleventh fairway. From that point he rapped a long brassie shot to within three feet of the cup and dropped his putt for a 3 on a 470-yard hole. Here is a case to be a big help for a running start.

Did you ever hear of a badly missed putt helping in the score?

On another occasion in that round his drive was far off line. On this occasion also he beat par by a stroke.

Five Leading Woman Tennis Players

Rick Breaks Record In Branch Brook 'Cross-Country Run

Marvin Rick, of Erasmus Hall High School, had to break a college record yesterday in order to win in the triangular cross-country meet between New Central, Erasmus Hall and Evander Childs High schools at Branch Brook, N. J. Rick beat the record of McCulloch, the Princeton star, for three miles by 12-5 seconds. The Brooklyn runner's time was 15:53 1-5, while that of McCulloch was 16:04 3-5, made two years ago.

Rick ran a good race and fought desperately for the last two hundred yards as Fisher, of Newark Central, was closing in on him. Rick barely managed to cross the finish line in front of the Newark rival. The team scoring honors went to Newark Central with the low tally of 20 points. Erasmus was second, with 49, and Evander Childs last with 79. New Central finished their five leading men in order from second to sixth place, inclusive.

The order of finish of the first ten runners follows:

Position	Name and School	Time
1	Rick, Erasmus	15:53 1-5
2	Fisher, Newark	16:04 3-5
3	Douglas, Newark	16:05
4	Lowder, Newark	16:15
5	Schwartz, Newark	17:00
6	Brown, Erasmus	17:05
7	Miner, Evander	17:11 1-5
8	Shaw, Newark	17:21 2-5
9	Burns, Newark	17:24
10	Thomas, Newark	17:34

Team scoring:

Newark Central	20	Erasmus Hall	49	Evander Childs	79

Capablanca Suffers Defeat

Jose R. Capablanca, of Havana, met his first important reverse in exhibition play on the occasion of his recent visit to Glasgow, Scotland. Capablanca lost one of two consultation games against teams of two and three players, respectively.

Wrestlers in Mad Scramble to Get Caddock Match

Earl Caddock's announcement that he is ready to return to the mat game, in an effort to regain the title he relinquished upon going to war, has stirred up a hornet's nest among the leading heavyweight wrestlers. Every toppler desires to get first crack at the big fellow.

Jack Curley has promised to match Caddock with the winner of the Joe Stecher-Ed (Strangler) Lewis championship match, which will be staged in Madison Square Garden a week from to-morrow night. The world's foremost wrestling impresario is promoting the Garden affair and is fairly besieged with requests from other grapplers to get them the Caddock match.

Among the latter are John Pesek and Wladek Zbyszko. Wladek is managed by Curley and is peeved because Joe Curley did not sign him up first to fight Caddock. "Zibzy" wired from his home in Maine last night that he really is deserving of being Caddock's first opponent.

Stecher is due to arrive in a few days to finish his preparatory work for the match with Lewis. The "Strangler" person is en route from his home in San Jose, Cal. The match will be to a finish, one fall to decide the winner.

Travers to Play Today

Two four-ball matches will be held today in the metropolitan district. George Frothingham and Pat Doyle, professionals, will play against William Travers and William Reekie, amateurs, in an exhibition over the Forest Park course in Brooklyn. Jerome D. Travers, former national amateur champion, and William Reekie will pair up against Frank Byer and S. M. Harding in a 36-hole match at Upper Montclair Country Club.

There is a difference also to consider. A missed putt rarely costs more than one stroke. But a missed drive may bring a heavy penalty. At Oakmont, in the amateur championship, any number of tee shots might have cost a player three or four strokes. One or two such misfires may cost as much as poor putting on four or five strokes.

Here is a case in sight. In his match with Ouimet, in the morning round, Chick Evans hooked his tee shot to a trap at the fifth hole. The ball stopped well back from the bank, upon the top of a ridge, leaving Evans a clean open mashie shot for the green. He dropped the ball four feet from the cup and got his 3, beating par.

In the afternoon Evans hooked to the same trap. But this ball was a different story. It was a mashie shot, and when he came to play it he was forced to play out at right angles, being unable to aim even in the slightest degree by the hole. There was no good luck to affect an approach putt that is ten feet short or ten feet over.

Public School No. 62 First In Track Meet

J. Jones, of P. S. 166, Manhattan, Captures 100-Yd. Dash in 11.3-5 Seconds

Public School 62, Manhattan, with a score of 38 points, won "The Sunday World" point banner at the annual grand final meet of the Public Schools Athletic League, held at the 22d Regiment Armory yesterday afternoon. Public School 37, Bronx, was second with a total of 25 points, and Public School 40, Manhattan, finished third with 19 points.

A crowd of three thousand youngsters was on hand to cheer the young athletes from the various public schools, who numbered about twelve hundred. The meet was well conducted and the numerous events were run off without a hitch.

After the singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner" by the entire assembly Justice J. T. Mahoney, referee of the meet, congratulated the young stars of their splendid showing.

Then introduced Judge Boyle, president of the Borough of Manhattan, who explained that Governor "Al" Smith, who has been the guest of honor, had been prevented from attending because of urgent official duties.

The victory of Public School 62 was a repetition of the result of last year's games. The contestants from the lower East Side school won first place in four of the events.

The various track events were keenly contested. The 100-yard dash, unlimited weight class, was won by J. Jones of Public School 166, Manhattan, in the fine time of 11.3-5 seconds. The 800-yard relay, unlimited weight class, was won after a hard struggle by the four members of Public School 14, Manhattan.

Several of the field events also furnished keen competition. In the running high jump, unlimited weight class, F. Simon, of Public School 10, Manhattan, with a leap of 4 feet 10 inches, won over F. Frenz, of Public School 32, Manhattan, who had a mark of 4 feet 9 inches. In the eight-pound shot put, unlimited weight class, R. Lund, of Public School 3, Bronx, with a toss of 56 feet 5 inches, gained first place over F. Muller, of Public School 14, Manhattan, with a margin of a single inch.

Amateurs to Have Chance to Compete Here in Tourney

Amateur billiard players have displayed marked interest in the newly instituted Eastern and Western championships for Class A 182 balling players scheduled by the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players for this season. The board of governors of the Amateur Billiard Club of New York determined at its last meeting to hold the Eastern classic in January. Meanwhile the Western players have arranged a preliminary tournament which is now in progress at Mussey's Academy, Chicago.

William T. Brace, president of the Western Association, enlisted L. A. Bensinger as an allied member of the national association, so that the tournament might be properly sanctioned. The list of competitors is a formidable one as it includes David McCandless, the national Class A titleholder; Percy, Collins, who was runner-up; Robert M. Lord, third in the last national tournament, and such lesser lights as Barrett, Hough, McGinniss, Walsh and Holt. According to reports received by the officers of the National Association the Illinois body has now enlisted over 10,000 members. All of its tournaments are to be decided under the direct auspices of the governing body.

Arthur B. Hyman, chairman of the executive committee, is arranging to include all the Class A titleholders in the Eastern championship section in the Eastern championship.

A. eleven at Todd Field to-day. The Interborough Football Club, newly admitted, starts off with a game against New York at Lenox Oval.

Faller Wins 10-Mile Run; Plant Victor

Bresnahan, Former Catcher for Giants, Abandons Baseball

This winter marks the passing from baseball of Roger Patrick Bresnahan, one of the most picturesque characters ever connected with the national pastime. "Duke of Tralee" is about to depart the game in which he gained renown. Bresnahan, it will be remembered, straddled the baseball horizon in the days of the old Giants, when he was the leading catcher of the National League. Roger acquired the soubriquet of "The Duke" from the old Club of the American Association, with the result that he played an unprofitable season in Cleveland, and set forth as a mag-nate.

He ran into the worldwide war and financial difficulties, and it was rumored that he went broke in the venture. Frank Coates, president of the company that operates the electric light and street railways in Toledo, has been offered the presidency of the Mudhens, which means that Roger is out.

Another champion lost his crown when William Plant, Morning-side Athletic Club, defeated Richard Remer, unattached, for the seven-mile national walking championship. Plant proved too speedy for Remer, who was a well beaten second. The winner's time was 55:06.2-5.

The race put up by Faller was equal to the form shown by Haines, Kolehmainen when the great Finn set the record of 51 minutes and 3.5 seconds in winning the title for the first time in 1918. Faller killed off many of his opponents by his pace, and was credited with covering the first mile in 4 minutes 48 seconds, and the second mile in 9 minutes 50 seconds.

Faller increased his advantage further when he went with the result that when he passed the five-mile point he was three-quarters of a lap in front of Pores, who was second. During the next mile Faller caught Pores, and for the last lap the pair staged a bitter sprinting duel, with Faller proving the stronger. Faller then succeeded in drawing away, and when Pores saw that his task of regaining his title was hopeless, he gave up the fight and quit.

Thereafter, Faller swept along unchallenged, slowing down his speed to cross the finish amid cheering. Halpin and Zander then held the attention of the spectators by their fight for second place, with Halpin the victor.

Plant proved himself a sturdier walker than Remer. For the first three miles the pair kept close together, although Plant had succeeded in gaining a fifteen-yard lead. At the fourth mile Plant again started to increase his lead, but Remer never failed to cut down. Remer also finished a safe second in front of Harry Dachs, American Walkers' Association. In the 1,000-yard handicap run, Harry Dachs, unattached, made a successful comeback when from scratch he romped away, from a field of seven starters, to win by seven yards in 2:22.5.

The summary:

10-mile run (national championship)—Won by Fred Faller, Dorchester Club, Boston, 55:06.2-5. Second, Haines, Kolehmainen, 56:22.5-5. Third, Pores, 57:22.5-5. Fourth, Zander, 58:22.5-5.
